IN GENERAL.

The Notorious George Hazzard Convicted at Indianapolis Yesterday.

Danger That a Bloody Time Will Be Had in Maine.

EXCITEMENT IN MAINE.

Boston, Dec. 27.—An August, Me., special to the Herald says the bitter feeling and chances of trouble seem to increase rather than diminish.

Congressman Frye's speech last night was not reassuring, and Congressman Reed thinks blood will be shed before the trouble is over.

It is understood that there is an excellent prospect of mob violence to-night, but it may be prevented. Meetings of both parties to-night will be numerous and few of the speeches conducive to peace. To-morrow's sermons will be more warlike, yet things are decidedly hot, considering that the mercury is below zero in the middle of the forenoon.

THE NEW YORK WALK.

New York, Dec. 27.—The day opened in Madison Square Garden with only sixteen pedestrians remaining in the race in which sixty-five started Sunday night last. Hart was vigorously applauded as he turned his 500th mile shortly after 11 o'clock. Krohn was likewise loudly cheered as he accomplished the same distance. Less than an hour later Faber was third, and the negro Pegram fourth. At 11 o'clock the score stood: Hart, 5000 miles; Krohn, 4887; Faber, 4957; Pegram, 4887; Hughes, 480; Fitzgerald, 471; O'Brien, 466; Campbell, 460; Williams, 460; Geldert, 454; Slow, 451; R. Davis, 436; Brady, 436; Danfrance, 431; Villet, 426; Rob, 416.

HAZARD CONVICTED.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 27.—George Hazzard was yesterday found guilty of failing to list the assets in his bankruptcy schedules.

ORDERED TO VENEZUELA.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The United States steamer Nipsic, Commander C. M. Schoonmaker, at Norfolk, has been ordered, without delay, to Leguay, Ven., to inquire into the circumstances attending the withdrawal or expulsion of Agent Eckert at that port from Barcelona, to which place he had been sent on public duty. The Nipsic will touch at St. Thomas to take on board Eckert, who is reported a refugee.

NUPTIAL NAUGHTINESS.

An Unfaithful Wife, An Amorous Youth and An Enraged Husband.

The Old, Old Story With Some Variations.

Montgomery street comes to the front with a little episode, in real life which has produced quite a sensation in that neighborhood.

The story goes that a young Benedict living on that street, who was married, three or four years ago, to the daughter of a well known citizen, returned home at a late hour a few nights ago, only to find another young man occupying the post of honor in the family couch, which the moral and social code assigns to the husband.

Of course, the latter was highly enraged, but by some means the interloper made his escape from the house without injury.

The infuriated husband went out and found a couple of companions and the trio followed up the amorous youth, overtaking him finally in a French-town saloon, where they administered to him a severe drubbing. At last accounts he was laid up for repairs.

The husband it appears had been suspecting his wife's fidelity for some time, and returned home at an unexpected hour with a view to getting some positive evidence on the subject. It is understood that a separation between husband and wife has already taken place and that a divorce suit is inevitable. "So runs the world away."

Personally appeared before me, Robert A. Meers, a notary public in and for the county of Allen and state of Indiana, William H. Nelson, one of the publishers of the Fort Wayne "Daily Sentinel," who being duly sworn testified that the above is a true statement of the circulation of the "Sentinel" for the above dates.

ROBERT A. MEERS, Notary Public.

THE GRANT boom in the south seems to have petered out.

THE virtuous indignation of the radical presidency seekers over the Maine "fraud," as they are pleased to style it, is extremely ridiculous. Big thieves always did feel contempt for the perpetrators of petit larcenies.

THE Ulica Herald, one of the leading republican papers of the east, says:

Two classes of people are still clamorous for Grant. One class includes the traders in politics who hope to see in his return to the white house the return of their day of harvest, so suddenly interrupted. The other and larger class includes the army of moral reformers, the timid folk who are still oppressed by the nightmare of the evil war, and think that GRANT is needed at Washington to repel some new imaginary attack upon the capital, which only he can conquer. It will be a sad day for the United States when a combination of these two classes can boast that it has dictated the government of the nation.

The Herald is right. But the two classes it mentions control the republican party and will force GRANT'S nomination.

STATE POLITICS.

The Warsaw Indianian is solid for Grant.

The Whitley County Commercial booms for Blaine.

The Rochester Sentinel is for Hendricks and Hampton.

The Columbus Republican endorses Horace E. James, of Jasper county, for secretary of state.

Col. Wm. Headington of Portland wants the empty honor of a republican nomination for state treasurer.

The Michigan City Dispatch suggests Dr. Orpheus Everts to the republicans for gubernatorial timber.

The Columbia City Post says it has not dropped Hendricks, but is for Seymour and Hendricks, if Hendricks cannot be nominated.

The Winamac Democrat says: Hendricks can carry New York if Tilden is in favor of his nomination. Tilden may not be nominated, but no man will be nominated who is personally distasteful to Tilden and his friends.

An interesting contest is in progress between the Decatur Democrat on the one hand and the Fort Wayne Journal and Lagrange Democrat on the other.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Emma Abbott is in Chicago.

Rignoli is coming over again soon. Remenyi talks of locating in Boston.

Modjeska is resting in her native Poland.

Joseph made a grand success in Cincinnati.

Glinka's "Life for the Czar" has been given nearly 500 times.

Mme. Pappenheim will leave London for Rome after the present season.

The chorus of the next Cincinnati musical festival will comprise 500 voices.

The virtuous editor of the Indianapolis Journal sighs for a "long-skirt drama."

Carl Rosa has successfully produced Goetz's "Taming of the Shrew" at Manchester, Eng.

Mapleson's Italian Opera Company will be in Chicago from the 12th to the 24th of January.

Before Miss Emma Thursby left London she presented Louis Engel with an elegant baton.

The Mapleson season of Italian opera in London has been one of the most successful ever known in that city.

Manager Mapleson pays Mlle. Marimon $30,000 (and travelling expenses for five persons) for a season of five months in America.

The Boston Ideal Opera Company is to give a week's season of "Pinafore" in Brooklyn and New York. Mr. J. C. Bartlett is the Ralph.

Grau's English Opera Company, including Miss Blanche Corelli and Mr. Henri Laurent, disbanded in Detroit, owing to poor business.

Sir Julius Benedict, who has just celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday, is about to lead to the matrimonial altar a young lady of twenty-two years of age; a nuptial.

The Emma Abbott Opera Company has brought out Gounod's "Roméo and Juliet." The critics pronounce it a success. The music is said to resemble "Faust" in many places.

Maggie Mitchell has met with a loss of $40,000—a misfortune which all who know her will regret. Some years ago she bought a sort of park at Long Branch for $75,000, paying $40,000 in cash, and letting the remainder go on mortgage, on which she paid the interest. Some two weeks ago the mortgage was foreclosed and the property put up for sale, being bought in, it is understood by the mortgagee. Thus, at one swoop, Mrs. Paddock loses $40,000 of her hard-earned cash.

Joe Jefferson has been making out an itemized bill for his performance of "Rip Van Winkle," to satisfy a grumbling manager, who thought $300 pretty steep for one night's work. The result was as follows, and the manager was fully satisfied:

|-------------------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| 8 years (twenty years on a cold, monomial, at $50 per year)..... | $400 00 |
| Going out in the rain with thin clothes..... | 100 00 |
| Advice to children..... | 50 00 |
| Taking care of uninsured dog..... | 20 00 |
| Drinking "properly" whisky..... | 20 00 |
| Simulation of drunkenness in use of salted..... | 8 35 |
| Keeping score on snifter..... | 1 00 |
| Making up with Gretchen..... | 10 00 |
| Dances..... | 10 00 |

CHRISTMAS MUSICAL PROGRAMME AT TRINITY CHURCH.

A large and cultivated assemblage of Fort Wayne's sweetest voices gathered at Trinity Church last Thursday morning forming a small portion of the entire auditory, drawn thither by the advertised programme of the musical part of the services, a double quartette choir having been carefully improvised for the occasion, selected from among the leading voices of the city. The opening chorus, "Venite," drew forth the full strength of the choir, and was a happy introduction to the impressive services that followed. In the "Te Deum Laudamus" the exquisite voices of Mrs. Evers and Mr. Yarnelle in the duet, were simply grand, and it was with difficulty that an audible score could be suppressed. These voices have been so thoroughly drilled together in "Pinafore," assuming, as they did, the respective roles of Josephine and Ralph, that a perfect combination existed, which was above criticism.

Mozart's "Jubilate" was forcibly rendered, Mr. Sam Taylor appearing in excellent voice. This gentleman possesses a clear tone, and noticeably distinct articulation in the lower bass register.

Miss Carrie Hanna made her debut on this occasion, it being her first public appearance. This lady possesses a voice of more than ordinary volume and shows up better in a large auditorium than in parlor exercises. "Without any seeming effort she filled the large church, every note being full and distinct. Miss Hanna will be a valuable acquisition to our home lyric circles.

Fort Wayne's own charming contralto, Miss Jessie Withers favored the congregation with a solo during the offertory, entitled "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," her sweet sympathetic tones going directly to the souls of her hearers. Miss Jessie possesses the faculty of throwing a singularly sweet pathos in her church music that never fails to call forth the most profound sympathies of all.

In the choruses, Miss Carrie Bellamy's voice was peculiarly prominent, and added much to the music. It was to be regretted that this young lady was not cast in a solo, that the public might hear her fascinating alto in its own purity.

Messrs. John A. Shumf and A. J. Lang maintained their high standard of excellence; their tones booming up in the choruses with marked effect.

Prof. Wellenstein's organ accompaniment was a complete consonance of agreeable sounds. He has had this choir in training ostensibly, and yet has had no full rehearsal, the excitement of the holiday season interfering with the practice, notwithstanding which the professor can well be proud of his voices.

At the conclusion of the services Rev. Mr. Webb very gracefully returned his thanks and those of his congregation to the choir for their gratuitous services on the occasion.

MULCTED MAINE.

Report of the Committee to the Council.

The following is an abstract from the report of the committee on Maine election returns made in the council:

Your committee in submitting this report finds it necessary to state specifically certain facts in connection with the returns from many of the towns, cities and plantations, which have material affected the result of the canvass and the votes returned.

There are many returns, which, owing to fatal defects, cannot be counted, but we shall specify only those which have affected the result. Article one, part one, section five of the constitution, regulates the manner of electing representatives to the legislature, and also the process of transmitting to the governor and council the evidence by which they are to determine who have been elected. This section provides that in cases of towns and plantations, municipal officers shall in your town and plantation meeting, at the close of the election day, sort, count and declare the votes cast, and form a list of all officers voted for, and after the name of each person thus voted for shall write the number of votes received by him. This last shall be recorded in open meeting, by actual record, and a copy of this recorded list shall be signed by the selectmen and attested by the clerk and sealed up in open meeting. This copy of the recorded list, thus attested, is to be deposited in the office of the secretary of state within thirty days thereafter. A section of the revised statutes requires that in addition to the foregoing specific mandatory provisions of the constitution, the returns shall state the whole number of ballots cast at the election. The same section of the constitution requires that the governor and council shall open the returns thus transmitted, and from them determine who appear to be elected, and the governor is to issue to such persons as thus appears to be elected, a summons to take seats in the legislature. The first requirement is that the returns shall be made out and set up in open town or plantation meetings. We understand this is required in order that the electors may be present and see that the returns are made in accordance with the facts, and we are of the opinion that the returns were not made up in open meeting, are not legal returns and cannot be counted, and we have acted upon this belief in making our returns. Several protests, accompanied with affidavits to support them, against the counting of the returns specified therein have been considered by us. These protests allege that said returns should not be counted because they were not served up in open town meeting, but were made after the meeting closed in some private office or store where no one but a portion of the municipal officers were present, and in some cases only the clerk. This condition of things, in several cases, has been proven to our entire satisfaction, and we have referred the returns thus defective in our tabulations in the case. In the town of Stenham, an affidavit signed by four selectmen, established the fact that they signed the returns in blank, and the township clerk took them home and filled them up, and the selectmen had no knowledge of what the returns contained.

We have rejected in our tabulations representative returns from the towns of Gay, Stoneham, Lisbon, Webster and Farmington. The return from the town of Sears's Port also has been rejected, because it was not sealed up in open town meeting. By means of these rejections a few persons will receive seats in the legislature who would not have been seated if returns from the aforesaid towns had been made up as the constitution requires.

WELL, WELL!

Another Good Man Gone Wrong.

For some time past there have been rumors reflecting upon the virtue of the Rev. A. W. Paige, pastor of the Methodist Church at East Glastonbury, Ct. He formerly preached in East Hampton, and one of the female parishioners there has had her name associated with his in the late scandals. This lady, who has hitherto borne an irreproachable character, has been considered, so it is now said, partially insane. Last Friday a letter was sent to her address at the post-office at East Hampton, and taken out by her brother. It was from Mr. Paige, who asked her to have a light in her window that night if everything was all right. The brother had the letter properly delivered, and waited for results.

Watching the house, he saw the amorous pastor approaching, and fired two shots from a pistol, whereat the reverend started to run, but was threatened with instant death if he did not stop. The threat was enough, for he surrendered, and on Saturday he was taken before an East Hampton justice, and not only pleaded guilty, but confessed to repeated criminal acts with the woman, covering a period of five years. The extreme penalty of the law was imposed—a fine of $7 and costs and thirty days in jail—and this morning the guilty man was taken to jail in Haddam, Middlesex county.

Paige has been a respected preacher in the Providence conference for thirty years, and has a grown-up family of great respectability.

RENEE AND FRANZ.

(LE BLEUET.)

FROM THE FRENCH OF GUSTAVE HALLER.

CHAPTER VI.

"No heart exists which has room for but one."

Blaise Blumen is an hour's drive from the city.

In summer it is embowered in flowers and foliage. Wild-rose bushes climb the house and enter the windows. The little brook which winds quite around the farm, laughing and bounding over the pebbles, assumes now and then the air of a river, which becomes it remarkably well.

My mother did not attempt to give the B. family a sumptuous reception; she welcomed them cordially and unpretentiously.

When we were seated at the simple lunch which awaited us, the duke said to my mother: "Your son, madame, is an intriguer, who insinuates himself into hearts whether they will or not; he has won my love, and I might say he has made us all love him."

"Oh, yes!" exclaimed Renee. "I knew it, monsieur," replied my mother. "Franz has written me every day, and I thank you for the few months of happiness you have given him."

"Why a few months?" asked the duke. "Franz will never cease visiting us. He is my son, and I come here because I felt it my duty to tell you so in person."

"I thank you, monsieur," returned my mother, with a pensive smile; "but I fear that if it should one day be necessary for Franz to forget you, he would not be able to."

"Forget us—and why?" "Destiny has placed him in a position very different from yours. For people of your class the affections are the charm of existence; for us they are existence itself."

"Would it then have been better, madame, for Franz to resist the sentiment he feels for us?" "Perhaps."

"Better if, when he felt his heart becoming enthralled, he had withdrawn the very first day?"

"Ah!" cried I, "even the first day it was too late."

"Then I am in the wrong," replied my mother; "and I fear that my frankness may seem like ingratitude. I beg your pardon. My narrow experience leaves me ignorant of many things. I confess, however, that I cannot understand Franz's affection for Mademoiselle Renee."

"Ah, well, then!" said the duke, laughing; "I am going to explain it, and make their confession to you, although I have as yet received none from them. I know their thoughts as well as they do."

"O father!" interposed Renee. "Let me speak; it will be time to correct me when I am in error; but I do not err. I have not been a diplomat for nothing."

Then, addressing my mother, he went on:

"Up to the present moment I have arranged my daughter's life in such a manner that every wish of her heart has been gratified. Youth and development, however, have needs which seek an echo in youth itself. Renee loves; her cousin dearly; but their ideas differ upon many points. Although they agree perfectly, there can never be any close intimacy between them. A portion of Renee's heart then remained unoccupied; this she has given away, or rather it has been taken from her, as you will. There is the culprit," he added, pointing to me. "These children are now having a beautiful dream—a dream of ideal friendship. They wish to give the world one of those famous examples in which people are no longer in the habit of believing—Orestes and Pylades!"

"You are making sport of us," said Renee.

"Oh, no, not at all! I respect your ideas; but I have not the faith you demand—the faith that removes mountains. In ten years I shall admire you; for the present, I comprehend you, and that is a great deal. You may well wish that all the world might do as much! Meantime, my dear children, let us keep all this to ourselves; the world need not be informed of sentiments whose reality it would not admit. We cannot have our ideas upon friendship inserted in a daily newspaper, nor make philosophers appreciate the affection this excellent man has for you, my daughter. I believe that he will all his life remain ignorant of the fact that you are a very fascinating person; but that would not be the general opinion."

"How good you are, father!" cried Renee, kissing him.

For myself, I could not speak. I took M. de B.'s hand, and pressed it to my lips.

"But supposing mademoiselle should marry?" asked my mother, in a half-whisper. "Do you think her husband would understand as well as you, monsieur, the friendship which unites our children?"

"I shall never marry," replied Renee, gravely.

"Do not think, madame," interposed the duke, "that I consent to a thing which does not appear perfectly reasonable; that would be too much to believe. I only yield to a sentiment which I cannot resist. I understand my daughter; she does not know how to do just what she would like to do with her heart. I submit, and I cannot, these children each to the honor of the other. Follow my example. Now, as the weather is fine, and I have my rifle here, I will leave you, and kill some game for dinner."

Augusta remained immovable. Her face had assumed a stern expression, with which I was quite unfamiliar.

"What is the matter with you?" asked her uncle.

"Oh—nothing!" she replied.

The duke, as he went out, turned to Renee, and whispered:

"Be on your guard! It is this child who doubts to-day; it will be the world to-morrow; she disbelieves because she does not understand."

"She will believe; we always believe the truth at last," replied Renee.

My mother remained pensive. Those confidences disquieted her.

"Franz," she said to me, gently, "I must ask you one question—an unavoidable question, for its answer alone can resolve my doubts. Imagine, my Franz, for a moment, that your friend is a farmer's daughter, and that she is offered you as a life-companion, a wife."

Renee and I burst into a laugh so frank and hearty that Augusta and my mother laughed also.

"We marry!" said Renee. "Why, Franz is my brother!"

"We marry!" echoed I; "what an ideal! It would be nonsense."

Renee placed her two hands over my mouth.

"You are impolite!" she said, laughing. I kissed her fingers.

Renee was unusually merry. In sport, I had placed a basket of flowers under her feet instead of a stool.

"How he loves you, mademoiselle!" said my mother, in a tremulous voice. "My affection cannot always follow him. Since you make him happy, I give him to you. Take him. Act as if from this day I ceased to exist, and when I am gone, there need be no change. He is a great boy with a loving heart; you could kill him. Do not be alarmed; to kill him, you would have to cease loving him."

Renee took my mother's arm, and we went out into the garden.

Augusta had all at once become lively and talkative.

"Do you know," she said to me, "that your answer just now was very amusing? Do you not wish to become Renee's husband? And yet it would be a good bargain for you, as the peasants say. Ah, indeed! You would not want a wife like her? You are hard to please. Do you think that any one could be more beautiful?"

"I remained silent."

"I am curious. Say! have you seen any one prettier than Renee?"

"Yes."

"Who can it be?"

"You!"

"That is a compliment!"

"Why should I pay you a compliment?"

"Indeed, why should you?"

"Am I mistaken? You seem surprised. Are you not very beautiful?"

"I do not know. I believe I am. And so you think me pretty? Take that for your pains!"

She drew out a rose half hidden in the bosom of her dress, and threw it at me. I seized the flower before it touched the ground. Augusta blushed to the eyes.

"What are you saying?" asked Renee, from a distance.

"Oh, nothing!" replied Augusta; "we are talking of this brook which flows away over its bed as if it were afraid of us. Hide my flower!" she added, excitedly, as if regretting what she had just done. "No, return it to me; that would be better."

"I do not want to return it to you."

She lifted her eyes with an imperious glance, but lowered them as she met my gaze.

The flower is a message of love between nature and man. If you are absent, it bears in its bosom your kiss to the one you love; if you are present, it expresses what words would express poorly; and so we never find lovers or even friends who do without flowers. Augusta and Renee had each given me a flower! But what a difference! The bluest, heavy with the evening dew, had shut its petals from the light, and Renee had given it to me as calmly as nature had offered it to her. The rose, vivid, satiny, had expanded under a southern sun, and Augusta had flung it to me glowing with the warmth of her bosom!

In truth, these two women had both taken possession of my being, and each with a sentiment so opposite that neither could be jealous of the other. Henceforth I should belong to these two great ladies upon whom I had not even wished to gaze.

No matter, even if we suffer for it; it is good to love.

The lives of those who are indifferent to love, must be a chastisement.

CHAPTER VII.

"We are good when we are happy."

After our visit to Blaise Blumen, Augusta passed from an affected cold, as to a nervous irritability which I could not interpret. She spoke to me as she would have spoken to a servant or to an unreasonable tyrant. She sought my society more than ever, but she attracted me to her only to torture me or to chill me. After flattering myself that I was no longer an object of indifference to her, I was forced to believe that she was trifling with me. I suffered so much that I was on the point of reproaching her heartlessness, when a grave event occurred, which for the moment diverted my thoughts from my love, and made me forget myself.

When we were returning from the fields, one evening, our farm-laborers found an unknown man hidden in a hay-stack, and took him for a malefactor. This class always regard a stranger hidden in the fields as a grain-thief, and without examination into his antecedents, without heeding a word he says, he is given up to the justice, too often after having been soundly beaten. Our men had seized this stranger, shaken him violently, and set him on his feet; they were now about to take him to the burgomaster, and would be sure to treat him roughly on the way.

M. Toquin, finding a single culprit in charge of a dozen sturdy fellows, went on his way, and left the affair in my hands.

I drew near, and saw the supposed criminal, a slight, dusky figure, in the midst of our farm-laborers. He was young, and I saw, even through the gathering darkness, that his garments, covered with dust as they were, could scarcely have belonged to a thief. I asked him who he was, and what he had been doing in our hay-stacks.

He murmured a few words in a foreign language. I knew that I could manage single-handed this diminutive person, who excited my pity far less than my curiosity, and I said to our workmen: "My friends, you are wasting your time here. This man is not dangerous. I myself will take him to the burgomaster."

The men withdrew.

I approached the supposed culprit, who had sunk powerless to the ground. He was half dead. I felt

MASONIC.

A Splendid Time Last Night at Summit City Lodge.

Public Installation of Officers—Speeches, Supper, Etc.

Summit City Lodge No. 170, F. and A. M., held their annual meeting last evening at their rooms in Masonic block, for the purpose of installation. The spacious rooms were filled to overflowing, many being unable to find more than standing room. Scores of handsome ladies lent their charming presence to the occasion. The exercises commenced with music graciously furnished by the West End Quintette Band, followed with prayer by Rev. M. Crowley. After which Past Master Samuel B. Sweet proceeded to induct the following officers elect to their respective posts assisted by Grand Master S. H. Shoaff:

W. M.—Levi Griffith.

S. W.—F. A. Ladd.

J. W.—Thomas C. Fleming.

Treas.—Israel Lee.

Sec.—D. W. Souder.

S. D.—John Keller.

J. D.—John J. Leach.

S. Steward—John G. Lehr.

J. Steward—O. T. Thomas.

Tyler—Wm. Knight.

These interesting ceremonies being concluded, Rev. M. Crowley delivered a brief lecture on the subject of the mystic order, followed by S. H. Shoaff in his usual happy manner. The ladies having in charge the supper arrangements, headed by Mrs. T. B. Empe, then proceeded to the discharge of their agreeable task, furnishing each of the 250 guests with a plate and loading the same down with an abundance of the good things of this temporal life. More music and more speeches followed. James E. Graham delivering a powerful peroration on the obligations of the craft, Hon. Peter Kiser winding up with a characteristic dissertation on the life and character of George Washington, America's Masonic Saint. His inseparable scrap-book and batchet were valuable adjuncts to his lecture, and added much to the interest of the occasion.

The affair was one of the most agreeable of the season and reflects much credit upon the enterprising membership of this wide-awake organization. It was near the midnight hour when the large and happy assemblage separated to their homes, the band playing "Come, Sweet Home."

MASONIC.

A Splendid Time Last Night at Summit City Lodge.

Public Installation of Officers—Speeches, Supper, Etc.

Summit City Lodge No. 170, F. and A. M., held their annual meeting last evening at their rooms in Masonic block, for the purpose of installation.

The capacious rooms were filled to overflowing, many being unable to find more than standing room. Scores of handsome ladies lent their charming presence to the occasion. The exercises commenced with music graciously furnished by the West End Quintette Band, followed with prayer by Rev. M. Croseley. After which Past Master Samuel B. Sweet proceeded to induct the following officers elect to their respective posts assisted by Grand Master S. H. Shoaff:

W. M.—Levi Griffin.
S. W.—E. A. Liegel.
J. W.—Thos. C. Fleming.
Treas.—Israel Lee.
Secy.—D. W. Souder.
S. D.—John Keller.
J. D.—John T. Leach.
S. Steward—John G. Lehi.
S. Steward—O. T. Thomas.
Tyler—Wm. Knight.

These interesting ceremonies being concluded, Rev. M. Croseley delivered a brief lecture on the subject of the mystic order, followed by S. H. Shoaff in his usual happy manner. The ladies having in charge the supper arrangements, headed by Mrs. T. B. Empe, then proceeded to the discharge of their agreeable task, furnishing each of the 250 guests with plate and loading the same down with an abundance of the good things of this temporal life. More music and more speeches followed, James E. Graham delivering a powerful peroration on the obligations of the craft, Hon. Peter Kiser winding up with a characteristic dissertation on the life and character of George Washington, America's Masonic Sage. His inexpressible scrap-book and hatchet were valuable adjuncts to his lecture, and added much to the interest of the occasion.

The affair was one of the most agreeable of the season and reflects much credit upon the enterprising membership of this wide-awake organization. It was near the midnight hour when the large and happy assemblage separated to their homes, the band playing "Come, Sweet Home."

The Palladium says: Last Thursday morning, December 15th, the house of Mrs. Perry Bell, of Keystone, Wells county, Ind., was burned to the ground with all its contents. This is a sad affair, it being but a few weeks since she lost her husband, and now the loss of her property makes her condition a sad one and leaves her almost distracted. Mrs. Bell is a sister of Mrs. Theodore McDougal, of Jefferson township.

A Card.

To the Editor of the SENTINEL:

I would like to have that peerless beauty, the young lady in Bloomington, has not had to be any more to little Andy yet, don't they say that the young lady in Bloomington is very much like thinking of Boss Andy and the young lady close to her very nicely and she don't want to see Andy very bad she is so glad so glad that Andy is gone.

A Fine Exhibition.

There never has been a finer display of holiday goods in the jewelry line than that now shown in the magnificent show cases of Trenkley & Scherzinger. Their goods have all been selected with singularly good taste and we doubt whether another jeweler in the state can show such a variety of artistic, ornamental and useful goods. Jewelry is the most appropriate and lasting article for holiday presents. It is well worth your time to look over their stock whether you wish to purchase or not.
